Caucuses Held by Fairbanks Men and the Field and Organization of the Joint Caucus Determined Upon.

LEGISLATIVE

FEEBLE EFFORT MADE TO OVER-THROW THE RULES OF THE HOUSE.

When the Committees Will Be Announced-Senate Amends the Legislative Appropriation Bill.

Yesterday was practically the last day of he senatorial struggle, and it witnessed a final spurt by both the Fairbanks and the McKeen followings. The followers of General Lew- Wallace and Judge R. S. Taylor did not make very strenuous efforts. The position of each of these candidates had been rather of a receptive nature, each holding himself in a position to get the benfit if the members of the Legislature should decide to elect neither of the men who have been in the canvass for so many months. There was practically a continuous caucus of the friends of Fairbanks, and another of McKeen all afternoon and evening. The friends or both candidates among the Republican politicians throughout the State had flocked to the city to put in a last word with the members representing their particular counties in behalf of their favorite, and it was no uncommon thing to hear one politician, whose word is usually good, declaring that the people of ty was declaring that it was practically unanimous for McKeen. Under such cirhesitated about telling how they intend to vote. Doubtless a number of them would like to see a secret ballot without any possibility of anybody ever anding out just

There was some surprise expressed among the friends of Mr. Fairbanks over the fact that all the candidates remained in the race. They had expected that one or two of them would withdraw before the ime came for the caucus, but it now seems certain that all four of the names that have been considered will be presented to the caucus and that none of them will be without votes. Various friends of Mr. Fairbanks claimed for him all the way from 54 to 68 votes, while various friends of Mr. McKeen conceded that Mr. Fairbanks would have from 26 to 38 votes. While each side brought as many of their friends among the members as they could into their caucus each also claimed that many of their strongest supporters were not present, and thus there was no effort to make of the caucusses a "show-down" of strength. Among those who turned up to participate in the final struggle was R. T. McDonald, of Fort Wayne, but he did not have any more wonderful plans concealed

At the caucus of the friends of Mr. Fairbanks yesterday afternoon there were present forty-nine members and eleven accounted for, among the latter two from this us this evening. Senator L. P. Newby was shosen as their candidate for chairman of as thoroughly settled, just as they have for On the other hand, the friends of Mr. Mc-Keen seemed equally confident of encompassing the defeat of Mr. Fairbanks. "The field has forty-eight votes," said Mr. Fil-

and cannot get any more. So far as we know here is no new alignment on the part of any of the members and the situation stands just there, where it did a week Senator Early stated that the McKeen forces had not discussed the matter of organizing the caucus. "That is immaterial." said he, "and they can have the chairman if they want him. We are confining our attention to the main point.' Among the prominent citizens of Terre Haute who are here in the interest of Mr. McKeen are Colonel R. W. Thompson and Russell B. Harrison. Among the prominent depublicans from out of town here in the interest of Mr. Fairbanks are W. T. Durbin, of Anderson, Indiana member of the national committee, and Perry S. Heath, who had charge of the literary department of the national committee.

WAS AN EASY DAY.

Legislators Devoted Yesterday Play-Fight Over the Rules.

Yesterday was a sort of a holiday for the members of the Legislature. They had to participate in the inaugural function, and it seemed to use them up for the rest of the day, for both the Senate and the House adjourned until this morning after the very brief session they held in the morning. Governor Haggard announced his committee appointments yesterday. The Lieutenant Governor had completed his list of committees Sunday evening, and gave them to the press. A few hours later his attention was called to the fact that the rules required that the committee on fees and salaries be made up of a representative from each congressional district. This had essitated a rearrangement of the whole list. It was too late to recall the list that had been wired out. It will be announced in the Senate this morning. The Lieutenant Governor stated, upon calling the Senate to order yesterday, that the official list was not yet ready to be announced. Mr. Smith made the first point of order, that a motion o reconsider must be made not later than he day after the adoption of the vote. The Chair ruled the point out, holding that this was the next legislative day. Mr. Hedgecock, one of the Democratic members, offered a resolution of some length, reciting the fact that a great many ex-Union soldiers had been discharged by the present Democratic administration at Washington, and asking the Indiana represenatives in Congress to work for a bill permitting their return to employment without passing the civil-service examina tion. It was referred to the committee on by Mr. Linck and adopted favoring the passage of the bill now before Congress for a national park to commemorate the siege of Vicksburg. The Senate met at 10 o'clock and did nothing but adjourn until 11:30. At that hour Senator Shively presided and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the appropriation bill passed by the House to pay the expenses of the session. There were a few questions as to whether the quiry as to whether it provided for a fair division between the two houses. The rules were suspended and the bill started on its passage. Speaker Pettit, of the House, confidently expected to be able to announce his committees this morning, but stated last night that some complications had arisen that necessitated further revision and he would probably not be able to announce them until to-morrow. Senator Haggard said he expected to be able to announce the Senate committees this morning.

Large Addition.

The officials of the First Baptist Church have a difficult problem to solve. The present audience room is too small to accommodate the large audiences. At the morning services every seat is usually taken and all available space utilized by additional chairs. In the evening the rush is still greater. Last Sunday evening hundreds were turned away because they could not get even standing room. The seating capacity of the present church is about 1,200 and more if crowded, as it usually is, and furnish larger accommodations for those who desire to worship there. One proposition is to purchase the property of John S. Spann, just north of the church, and put an addition to the church of a seating eapacity of 800 or 1,000.

RITTER

MAY TELL A FEW THINGS TO STAR-TLE THE BOARD OF SAFETY.

He Writes a Pertinent Letter to May or Taggart-Not Making Administration Scapegoats.

Captain Eli F. Ritter will appear before the Board of Safety to-morrow morning, and it is expected that he will tell a few things under eath that may startle the members of the board. A subpoena was issued for Mr. Ritter yesterday morning. It is understood that the Good Citizens' League has had a number of private detectives taking notes of dates and specific violations of the Nicholson law and that Mr. Ritter is prepared to substantiate the charge that the liquor law is being violated as it never was before, and that winerooms are numerous in the city.

Yesterday Mr. Ritter gave out the followng open letter to the mayor: "Dear Mayor - Your interview in the News concerning myself has been duly received and contents noted. Permit me to suggest that it will do you no good to get red in the face and say hard things. You complain that information was not brought to you of particular disregard of duty by individual patroimen. It a few patroimer have been guitty of negligence of outy when there was an earnest determination to faithfully enforce the law on the part of your administration, then the proper course would be to expose the derelictions, but it would be pusilianimous to be led into an atagreed to unanimously. A very material evidence shall appear on the back of the indictment. These indictments are not all open to public examination yet, because arrests have not been made in all cases named. All of them, however, are at this time, or I think will be, subject to your examination within a few days. think it will appear that not a policeman's name will appear on one of these numerous indictments as a witness. No doubt, police-men were subpoenaed before the grand jury at the December and November terms. It is a singular thing that in this very large number of indictments for the December term against violators of the liquor law that not a policeman in the city who is on duty day or night in the immediate localities where these offenders did business-I say that it is singular that not a policeman knew anything about these numerous violations of the law. You may say that policemen present cases to the Police Court, and that I understand, but the cases presented there are mere petty offenses. I ask you to run over the docket of the Police Court for six months and name the cases where men who are proprietors of winerooms have been presented to that court by the police force. The police docket is loaded with charges of drunkenness, fighting and some trivial offenses, but it would take a very short time to dispose of every case against saloon keepers, wineroom keepers, gambling-room keepers and bawdy-house keepers for violations of the liquor law. "LEGAL" WINEROOMS. "You say, in your eloquent remarks in he News, 'that the police keep all winerooms and saloons within the legal requirements.' What do you mean by keeping the winerooms within the legal requirements? The wineroom cannot be kept these cases. You are the proprietor of hotel and the proprietor of the saloon in your name. I do not intend to do the cowardly thing of complaining of little saloons n the suburbs, or holes in the wall in obscure places. I call your attention to the saloons in the New Denison Hotel, in the Bates House, Grand Hotel and the gilded saloons kept by the nabobs in that busi-These places have no more rights than have the most obscure proprietors with the most insignificant saloons.

NOTORIOUS ROADHOUSES. "I call your attention to the sale of liqlaw in winerooms that now flourish all great attraction. The number using it has over the city. I call your attention to the roadhouses in the suburbs, notorious and infamous, that flourish and against which and already the association is beginning to no proceedings have been instituted by your force. You have not only a large poice force, but you have a detective force expressly for that purpose, and it will not do for you to say that all this force of men could not have ascertained the facts and presented these violators of the law, where the grand jury was able, without any assistance from force, to ascertain the facts and return indictments. I do no want you, in this, to understand that I am complaining of the policemen and detectives. I am satisfied that there are men on the walk into any danger with the same courage that men walk into battle, would face death in the discharge of their duty. they are inspired by a commander to do so, and know that they will be rewarded after banking hours, and will be completed rather than condemned and their position jeopardized, if they are faithful in the discharge of duty. I am not talking about hese men who have not had a fair chance and who are demoralized by the conditions about them. I am talking to you, you are the man who is responsible, and you cannot escape this by getting angry and saying hard things. It is very apparent to any man who is observing of the situation that during the present session of the Legislature great privileges are to be allowed especially to influential violators of the law and certain depraved members of the Legislature. I want to say, with pleasure, that I have the personal acquaintance a large number of bers of the Legislature who are men of as clean lives and character as can be found in the State of Indiana. It is humiliation to them and to the State of Indiana, to the good morals and common decency of our people, that privileges and immunity for the violation of law shall be granted and permitted with impunity, in order to accommodate a few who chance to be members of the Indiana Legislature. Against this as a citizen I protest, and in his protest let me say I do not stand alone. WEAK LEGISLATORS.

"Some of the weak members of the Inliana Legislature are going to have a hard time of it during this session with the influence of wine suppers by the controlling influence of the street-car company, saloons, gambling schemes and resorts. "You and we all ought to exert ourselves to the utmost to rescue and protect these weak brethren. They are only a few, but Neither Speaker Pettit nor Lieutenant | the question now is what can be done to | their number is large enough and they are worth saving. It has been notorious heretofore, has gone out over the State with its demoralizing and blasting influence or young men, that the vile associations and disgraceful conduct of some men in the Legislature could be laughed at as a joke. To me these things are no jokes. It is a question now for your consideration whether you will permit the police force to shut their eyes, turn their backs and absent themselves from their posts and fail to do their duty, in order that these disgraceful things and these violations of the law shall be repeated. The people in this city and State of Indiana in very large and influential numbers have become tired of these things and determined to have a change. I know what it is to sound the alarm on gave Hughes an emetic and soon had him these subjects to which I am calling your out of danger. Hughes claims he took the attention. It is not a pleasant thing to me, but I cannot do otherwise and discharge my duty as a citizen. I am willing to risk sufficient to have killed sveral men. the condemnation of those sitting in high places and the liquor tricksters who would sacrifice the moral welfare of the people

It Is Not Mr. Powell.

There are 150 men who have positive knowledge that a statement printed yesterday in a morning and in an afternoon paper about ex-Superintendent of Police Powell driving about the South Side watching liquor-law violations was without foundation, or else some one was mistaken for Mr Powell. The 150 men are members of the Knights of Pythias, with whom Mr. Powell spent Sunday afternoon at a funeral of a People, convicted in the lower court of deceased member at Crown Hill. In the morning he was at church, and at no time during the day was he in a buggy riding about town. It is believed by Mr. Powell's friends that the story was started by saloon keepers in order to throw discredit on the work of the present grand jury, of which Mr. Powell is foreman.

Forty-Four Indictments.

Reference is made in the letter of Captain Ritter to indictments returned by the last grand jury. There was a total of forty-four indictments against saloon keepers. All of the men indicted have not been arrested. Those who have been arrested and have given bond are: Harry Smith, Henry Smith, Lewis Burkhard, Harry Walker, John Saunders, Frank O'Brien, Frank Gorman, Henry Moran, John Kistner, John Roller, Jacob Roller, Benjamin Kirsting, William Miller (in two cases), William Tron and Charles Powers (three cases), Jack Zimmerman (in seven cases), and reindictments against Herbert Green and David Smith.

COUNTESS DI BRAZZI'S WORK Her Efforts in Behalf of the Poor

Italian Peasantry.

There is an interesting exhibit of Italian lace at the Propylaeum this week, and will be continued each day from 9 to o'clock, under the charge of Miss Alice Dickinson. The lace exhibit is made by the Countess di Brazza, of Italy, under the auspices of the Art Association. There are many novelties in the collection, one being a tablecloth for a round table; a point d'Alencon scarf, of the Louis XVI period, designed by her Majesty the Queen of Italy; a piece of Argentan lace, a facsimile of that ordered by Napoleon I for Cardinai istration, as the individual who can control | Retz, who left all of his laces by will to the house of Savoy. An antique Brussels lace fine flat Italian lace, the stitch for which it was revived, is rare. There are numerous household articles, such as sheets, towels, pillow cases and wash cloths and shaving towels, which people in Italy always have lace trimmed. The whole collection is interesting from several standpoints.

Yesterday afternoon the Countess di Brazza gave an informal talk, prefacing the subject of lace with a general talk about Italy and its various industries. Everything grows in Italy, but it has no under- on file. ground wealth, except sulphur. It is closely inhabited, and every plat of ground grows several crops. Every peasant in Italy has to learn to make roads, and the speaker gave this as a reason why so many Italians who come to this country seek employment in road making. The tariff of the country is the cause of so much being imported from Italy to France, instead of vice The speaker told about what is raised in Italy, and the uses to which much of it is put. One of the new inventions of the country is that of shredding the boughs of mulberry trees, the leaves of which are devoured by the silk worms, and by a certain process making from the limbs a strong fabric which is much used for upholstering. Artistic taste is inherent in the Italians. Embroidery is nurtured in the religious orders, and all industries are taught in the government schools, from washing to art designing.

When the countess, who was born and raised in New Orleans, went to Italy to live she wanted to get nearer the people not by going down to them, but by elevating them. To this end she consulted the body of men who are interested in reform in each province, and she had their approval, and so on the Di Brazza estate a fair was held one day and rewards offered for the best display in many things. The prizes were from 50 cents to $5, the latter being given for the best conducted farm. There were 30,000 visitors to the fair. As a winter industry which might be pursued indoors lace making was introduced, the countess herself teaching the first children. This in dustry was shown at the next fair, the following year, and eighty names were registered. From this beginning the lace industry has grown and several schools have been started. A bedridden aunt of one of the children learned from the child to make lace, and a new hope and incentive to live came to her, for every Italian respects himself more when he contributes his quota to the work or wage of the family. The speaker mentioned some of the rules governing the lace schools, and while making the lace prayers are said, songs are sung and stories of kind deeds, charities and kindness to animals are recited. Thus, with busy fingers, tongues and minds the children have no time for mischief. Since the work has been so generally introduced the morals of the districts have improved. The Countess di Brazza's school made a tablecloth, with napkins, doylies and the tea-set pieces for the princess who was married to the Crown Prince of Italy a short time ago. money was contributed than needed, and a fund for sick girls was created. In closing the speaker said: "I want you to feel that it is better to wear a small piece of handmade lace than to wear flounces of ma-
